Annapurna area is located east of a great gorge cut through the Himalaya by the Kali Gandaki river. The mountain has glaciers on its western and northwestern slopes which drain into this gorge. The Annapurna massif is perhaps the most astonishing and unforgettable mountain range in the Himalayas. There are seven major peaks in the region, including Annapurna I, the tenth highest mountain in the world, and at the centre of the massif is the Annapurna Sanctuary, a beautiful glacial plateau ringed by mountains. The walking country in and around this mountain range is simply spectacular – it is no surprise that trekking in the Annapurnas are amongst the most highly regarded walking holidays in the world.
